Soviet writer protests clampdown

By Paul Wahl

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

Deep anxiety has gripped the Soviet Union's writers as the party once more clamps down on them. Some of the best authors have even been threatened with exclusion from the Writer's Union, which is equivalent to a publication ban.

But the writers' spirit has not been broken. As continuing protest letters show. The most recent of these to reach the West was sent to Konstantin Fedin, the president of the Soviet Writers' Union, by Yevgeniy Kavrin, a respected novelist and essayist of Konstantin Paustovsky's generation who has open literary views.

At immediate issue is publication of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "The Cancer Ward," which was set in print but then abandoned at the last minute, according to party instructions. Mr. Solzhenitsyn's worldwide fame was established by his book about Stalin's labor camps, "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich." Manuscripts of the new novel have been circulating for months, and several Western editions are appearing currently.

Letter quoted

"We have known each other for 48 years, Kostya."

"Mr. Kavrin begins in his protest letter to Mr. Fedin against the publication ban on 'The Cancer Ward'."

"In youth we were friends. We have a right to judge one another. It is more than a right, it is a duty. Your former friends have wondered more than once what might have guided your behavior during the life of our literature that forged the souls of some of our best writers."

"Who does not know the case of Pasternak's novel, a matter that caused our country much harm. Your part in that matter went as far as that you had to make believe you did not know of the death of the poet who had been your friend and who had lived alongside you for 22 years. Perhaps you could not see from your window the crowd of thousands that saw him to his last resting place, that bore him past your home, carrying him above their heads."

'How could you?'

"How could it be that you not only did not support, but trampled down Literaturnaya Moskva, an annual anthology that our literature needed? On the very eve of the meeting of 1,500 writers at the Motion Picture Actors' Club you supported this publication. Though your pocket held an already written speech of dangerous betrayal, you praised our work and found no shadow of political mistake in it."

"This is far from all, but I do not intend this letter to sum up your public activity, which is widely known in the writers' community. Not for nothing was your name greeted with utter silence at the celebration of Paustovsky's 75th birthday. I would not be surprised if, now that Solzhenitsyn's 'Cancer Ward' has been banned at your instigation, your first appearance before any large writers' meeting would be greeted with whistling and stamping feet."

"Do you not realize that the very fact of publication of 'The Cancer Ward' would relax the unprecedented tension in literature, would undermine the undesired mistrust of it, would open the way for other books that would enrich our literature?"

"A. Bek's superb novel, first permitted, then suppressed, but unconditionally approved by the country's best writers, exists in manuscript. K. Simonov's war diaries in manuscript. This is hardly a single serious writer who does not have in his desk a manuscript that has been submitted, considered, and forgotten for reasons that are incomprehensible and beyond the bounds of common sense."

"But let us return to Solzhenitsyn's novel. There is not one publishing house or magazine, not one writers' club where it has not been said that Markov and Voronkov were FOR publication of the novel and that the type was melted down only because you firmly declared yourself AGAINST it."

"This means that the novel remains in thousands of galley proofs being passed from hand to hand and sold, they say for large sums. This means it will be published abroad. We shall surrender it to the reading public of Italy, France, Britain, and West Germany, i.e., the very thing that Solzhenitsyn himself energetically and repeatedly protested against will happen."

World fame awaits

"Perhaps persons will be found in the leadership of the Union of Writers who think they will be punishing a writer by surrendering him to foreign literature. They will be punishing him by world fame, which our opponents will utilize for political goals."

"But your action signifies something else. You are taking a responsibility upon yourself without evidently realizing how huge and significant it is."

"A writer who lies the nose around another writer's neck is a figure that will remain in the history of literature, regardless of what the former has written and quite regardless of what the latter wrote. You will perhaps, without suspecting it yourself, become a center of ill will, indignation, and dissatisfaction in the literary community."

"This can be pardoned only if you find within yourself the strength and courage to renounce your decision."

"You realize without question how difficult it was for me to write this letter to you. But I did not have the right to be silent."

V. Kavrin

New look for NATO

An hour's ride from Brussels, a massive new complex of buildings now houses the military headquarters of the North Atlantic Alliance. The vast, clean-lined structure symbolizes the new look NATO is gaining since it left France.

A new NATO

Brussels headquarters matched to evolving role

By Carlisle Morgan

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Paris

NATO is renewing itself in more ways than one.

It also has a new assignment. The new place is near Brussels. The new job is defense.

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good," the man at NATO said. The old-fashioned saying didn't seem out of place even in that spanking new setting Belgium has provided for Western Alliance's two European headquarters. The comment is typical. Civilian officials and military officers who have moved with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization from Paris share this attitude.

New life shown

"One of the important results of change is that the alliance seems to be taking on new life," a military officer said.

"That's true," a high civilian spokesman agreed. "In Paris the NATO system seemed to be running down. It was only because of General de Gaulle, the basic job of making Western Europe militarily secure had been rounded out. But the Gaullist policy did seem aimed to convince us all that NATO was a thing of the past. Here we have in a sense begun anew. Even the fact that all the alliance, except for one nation, was willing to put so much money and effort into new headquarters was stimulating. We seem to be on our way again."

A year has passed since President de Gaulle forced withdrawal of the alliance's top military headquarters from France. The move brought the military leadership to Casteau-Bruxelles. This is a village on the outskirts of Mons, a compact old town of less than 30,000 people.

'Wilderness' transformed

Here, an hour's auto ride from Brussels, a massive new complex of buildings stood ready in April, 1967, to house SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe) under its flag of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The buildings rose on land that had been described as a "muddy wilderness" when the bulldozers were leveling it up in the winter months.

Then a few months later a new civilian headquarters was completed too. There all 15 NATO flags can fly, including the tricolor of France.

France has pulled out of the integrated military activities of the alliance, but it keeps a seat in its civilian "cabinet," the North Atlantic Council. So in the austere, gray-yellow buildings not far from the center of Brussels, France cooperates with "the new NATO" to relax European tensions.

"The French seem to drag their feet but they at least take part, and we are glad to have them," non-French officials agree.

'Harmel Report' ready

So NATO now has approval by all 15 members for its "Harmel Report." This originally seemed to run counter to President de Gaulle's ideas in two ways.

The report, prepared by outgoing Belgian Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel, said there was real need to maintain a deterrent against possible Communist aggression in Europe at a time when the French President was downgrading the alliance and conducting a personal campaign to make friends with the Soviet Union.

It also assumed for NATO a new peace-seeking role, but one which conflicted with President de Gaulle's convictions. He held that this role should be performed by countries separately and not by a collective effort in NATO.

Even though the French are not very enthusiastic about the Harmel Report, they have endorsed it. This has narrowed a little the gap that was widening between France and NATO in 1967.

But the report has watered down the hopes of NATOians who wanted the alliance to take strong collective steps for relaxing world tensions. NATO now acts mainly as a clearinghouse and for consultation among nations making their own moves to improve contact with East European countries.

New buildings better

Among physical gains accruing from NATO's removal from Paris are the new buildings. Both the $22 million SHAPE complex near Mons, and the in town NATO offices have been planned for efficiency on the basis of years of experience in the Paris region. There is no possible comparison between the former threadbare and under-sized military headquarters building at Rocquencourt, near Paris and the new vast, clean-lined structure at Mons.

A still larger gain is psychological. Both the military and civilian organizations feel welcome in their new locations. Members of the staff say so frankly. Belgian citizens today confirm this feeling of welcome.

"At first," a small Belgian businessman told this writer, "we did share some anxieties. But they have passed."

"We thought that new demand for apartments and houses would cause rents to rise. Some of our people did try to overcharge the NATO folk. But the building boom plus some older unoccupied dwellings helped to prevent a rent inflation."

"Then also, the alliance authorities here have provided housing for their own people. This has reduced pressure on local housing."

Traffic a threat

This man was speaking of both Brussels and Mons. But in Mons itself the worry was not only about housing. "Suppose," said a SHAPE officer, "that most of the 8,000 people at SHAPE descended on Mons for an evening, bringing into its narrow, winding, hilly old streets about 3,000 automobiles?"

"Of course, it wouldn't happen just like that," a Mons citizen replied, "but the figures give you an idea of the possibilities."

What has actually happened is that most of the 8,000 people at SHAPE find their entertainment on the big base. There are clubs for officers, for non-commissioned officers, and for enlisted men. There is a fine theater and an enormous bowling alley. A youth center provides dances on Friday and Saturday nights.

Local schools have been spared any great influx of children from SHAPE. The base includes five schools. Only the children of parents who live away from the base use the Belgian schools.

All this tends to keep friction between the military base and nearby civilian communities at a minimum.

Wood art for Denver

By the Associated Press

Denver

Denverites will have the opportunity to watch art progress from the ground up starting June 12 as nine artists begin work on wood sculptures up to 40 feet high.

The projects — when completed — will become property of the city, and any work the city decides not to keep will be destroyed.

Indy cars have jumped 20 m.p.h. in seven years

By Don Davis
Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Indianapolis

Time trials this past weekend at Indianapolis vindicated motives of the United States Automobile Club for placing restrictions on the STP Turbine four-wheel-drive racing cars.

After the fantastic opening qualification performances of the STP cars—Joe Leonard at 171.589 m.p.h. and Graham Hill at 171.588—it is apparent that crippling limitations have not been imposed, at least not during the time trials.

It is also apparent that turbo-charged Offenhausers, such as that used by Bobby Unser to gain the outside of the front row at 169.507, are competitive to the turbines at least during time trials.

Also Dan Gurney's placement of his Eagle chassis (stock block Ford engine with Westlake heads) on the inside of the fourth row represents a major engineering feat. This Gurney Westlake engine costs less than half that of the Ford DOHC (double overhead cam) engine and one-third that of the turbines here.

All turbines in the future?

Currently Gurney's All-American Racing team is building the best chassis available for a piston-engine car. If the turbines experience problems in running the full 500 miles an Eagle chassis should be a logical winner candidate. Unser also rides on an Eagle chassis.

Dan Gurney's Ford-powered Eagle won a pole position bid for the Indianapolis 500 on May 30. But the Santa Ana, Calif., racer feels that piston cars won't be able to compete with the turbines on race day.

able to compete with the turbines on race day. "The speeds all which they qualify are the speeds they will run during the race," he says. "The piston-engine cars add nitro to increase their performance during time trials and consequently drop 5 to 6 m.p.h. on race day."

Gurney is not against turbines per se, but he does say: "What has to be decided now is do we want to change the nature of motor racing? If turbines are to be allowed in the future then we'll have to go to turbines."

Dan also concedes that turbines plus four-wheel drive would mean much faster speeds at the Speedway. "We've jumped 20 m.p.h. in seven years, mostly due to tires and chassis. Four-wheel-drive-turbine power could conceivably see a similar increase in the next 10 years," he said.

Laps of 191 m.p.h. at the Speedway seem unbelievable now, but so did 171 back in 1961 when many observers doubted the 150-m.p.h. lap was possible.

Designed for only 90 m.p.h. The Speedway track still has the original 9 degree banking first constructed in 1910. It is quite unlike the new super speedway right physical limitations. The super speedway right physical limitations. The super speedway right physical limitations.

Indianapolis was designed for a maximum speed of 90 m.p.h. So 171-plus represents a startling overcoming of seemingly right physical limitations. The super speedway right physical limitations. The super speedway right physical limitations.

Not least among these is the Indianapolis Motor Speedway owner, Tony Hulman. He can't be accused of monetary interest in the controversy's outcome inasmuch as the profits from each year's race are reinvested in a stadium which will bring about the totally in improving this Hoosier racing shrine.

Hulman made a significant prediction back in 1960 when he noted the future of racing in a statement quoted in Al Bloomer's informative book, 400 Miles to Go. "By 1970," Hulman said, "we will have turbine-powered cars racing in the 500.... The conquest of space will bring about the development of new fuels, new metals, and new ideas applicable for transmitting increased power to land vehicles."

Hulman feels that the racing fan expects to see the world's best drivers and cars at the Speedway and he welcomes all such advances to his world-famous race course.

Archaeologist cites 'decadence'

By Robert C. Cowen

Mila, Mexico
American archaeologist John Paddock studies the decline and recovery of one of Mexico's ancient Indian civilizations and thinks of the United States today.

Among the potsherds, tumbs, and ruined buildings in this much-loved valley may lie a clue to society's development that will help Americans gain perspective on their own times.

"We are trying to define decadence," Professor Paddock says. "Just as our own society should ask if it's in a period of decadence or transition, we are asking that about phases in the development of the ancient societies that flourished here. In talking about America's troubles, we assume it's decadence without asking what we mean by it. We should question this. Perhaps in our studies here, we can provide some clarification."

Mr. Paddock has rich source material. You can't put your foot down in the Valley of Oaxaca (wah-HAH-ah) without stepping on antiquity. By an unfinished count, there are 270 archaeological sites here. The list will probably go over 300. And that doesn't include any site without a pyramid. A complex with only a few houses and potsherds doesn't even count.

Elaborate ceremonial center

At one end of the valley, the great center of Monte Albán covers a high plateau. Beginning perhaps around 700 B.C., it grew into one of the most elaborate and beautiful ceremonial centers of the ancients.

At the other end of the valley, Mila remains a living town more than three millennia of activity. Ruins of palaces inhabited by priests and nobles in late pre-colonial times lie at its periphery.

Men have lived in the valley for at least 10,000 years that archaeologists know about. Caches of vegetable foods left in dry caves and stone altars help date the living sites.

Advanced cultures developed in the valley before 1000 B.C., a thousand years or more Monte Albán, ancient center of pyramids, temples, and other structures, covers a high plateau near Oaxaca, Mexico. It was one of the great Indian architectural achievements, dating as far back as 700 B.C., when the first construction probably began.

Mexico digs for its roots—3 before comparable development in the area around Mexico City.

As archaeologists refine their dating methods, Mr. Paddock says they persistently find Oaxacan development to be earlier than that of most other Mexican places. There's good reason for this, he adds, for Oaxaca is a good place to live.

Climate transitional

The valley ranges in altitude from 5,500 feet at Mila to 4,500 at its lower end. It's at the crucial altitude. The tropics where you can grow most tropical plants and most high-altitude plants at the same time. In the pulio of the Museo Fissile de Arte Zapotecos at Mila, where professor Paddock works, an apple tree and a coffee tree grow side by side, both bearing fruit.

All and all, it's much more desirable here than in the Valley of Mexico which is a bit high (7,500 feet). And the Valley of Oaxaca is rich in minerals too. It's hard to break down Oaxacan civilization into specific periods. Many unknown groups came and went. But for the past several thousand years, the Zapotecs and Mixtecs have dominated.

Today, 200,000 Mixtecs live in the surrounding hills while 220,000 Zapotecs live in the valley. That's out of a total of 400,000 Oaxacan Indians belonging to 13 distinctive groups.

Decline, renaissance seen

When the Spanish came here, the Mixtecs had commanded the valley and Monte Albán for several centuries. The Zapotecs who preceded them had somehow lost their grip. Their society became decadent until the Mixtec invasion injected new vigor.

This is the process of decline and renaissance that fascinates Mr. Paddock. He now is digging into a midvalley pyramid-tomb complex called Lambityeco that reflects the decline that set in about A.D. 700.

"Look at this awful thing!" he exclaimed, holding up a poorly shaped jar with a crude figure on it. "This is the corn god, the staff of life. The black leopard in Woolworth's is better than this! The tomb pottery is so badly fired it eroded in the tomb. And some objects are of unrefined clay. It's a clear case of decadence."

Everyday clay dishes are of a long-used design. They are serviceable enough. But they are roughly made compared to the fine work of earlier periods.

Poor workmanship clear

Decadence shows in the architecture too. At Monte Albán and elsewhere, buildings have cores of well-made adobe. Finely cut stones fit tightly together to cover them. No water could get in. A thin covering of plaster served only as a surface for painting.

But at Lambityeco, plaster covered up poor workmanship. The pyramid was a rude earth mound with a thin, leaky stone sheathing. It needed a thick plastering to keep out the water and hide the shoddy construction. The tomb obviously is that of a rich and powerful person. But he could not buy quality.

"It was just a bad period, that's all," Mr. Paddock explains. "In quantity, they had a lot. They just didn't have quite the quality."

Then the Mixtecs took over and excellence returned.

The Mixtecs and Zapotecs were one people until 500 to 400 years ago, Mr. Paddock notes. "We don't know why they differentiated. It's a process that still goes on."

"When the Mixtecs invaded, they had the same basic culture as the Zapotecs. But their culture had diverged. It remained primitive and vigorous when that of the Zapotecs declined. But it never lost all its similarities. The Mixtec invasion sparked a renaissance."

"Here," he added, "we are working with decadence and recovery and ethnic group conflict in a non-European context. Perhaps we can learn something relevant to our own times."

strong interest in ending the bombing of North Vietnam, which is the subject in early drafts of the talks. Neither side has made a move to modify its position here, each saying that it already has made important concessions.

From the Soviet viewpoint, American warplanes over North Vietnam are operating on the Communist side of the East-West dividing line, whose Asian end extends through the demilitarized zone in Vietnam and the 38th parallel in Korea.

Cold war imbalance

Meanwhile since the Cuban crisis, no Soviet military force is in action on the non-Communist side of the line. This "imbalance" is a matter of primary concern to the Soviet leaders who look at North Vietnam as one segment of their international picture.

So, also, is their often stated objection to North Vietnam, which is under attack at home as well as conducting a revolution in South Vietnam.

The Soviet Union appears to have only a lesser interest in what happens south of the 38th parallel in an area that has been under a non-Communist government during the cold war. It supports "war of national liberation" in general. But its degree of specific support is limited.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union has an obvious national interest in keeping Communist China from expanding its military power at a time when Moscow is refraining from such moves and is having difficulty in pressing over its front yard in Eastern Europe.

This interest has been shown notably in aiding India to defend itself against past and potential Chinese incursions on the northeast frontier.

Stage set for aid

The stage is set, therefore, for some kind of Soviet assistance in ending the bombing of North Vietnam by concessions here at Paris, if and when the Soviet leaders wish to move. They could make a public suggestion, but are more likely to act in private.

There is a possibility that the North Vietnamese delegation here is becoming interested in some sort of arrangement over the demilitarized zone (DMZ). It is slender enough so that no conclusions can yet be drawn.

If the DMZ is "restored to its original function" as the Americans wish, this could free American reserves which have been compelled to stand ready all along that line. It would be a considerable advance to the South Vietnamese American forces.

Both sides are aware of this, so a genuine "diversification" in this direction from Hanoi would be good cause for President Johnson to end the bombings.

Population boom at the zoo

At the National Zoological Park in Washington, births since mid-March include bighorn sheep, an owl monkey, a Barbary ape, a zebra, and scores of smaller animals.

About 800 mammals, birds, reptiles, and invertebrates are born annually at the zoo, a full-dedged bureau of the Smithsonian Institution.

Looting produces 'hot' money orders

Commercial money orders stolen from scores of Washington stores were burned and looted last month, being cashed here and in other cities.

Officials recommended that anyone asked to cash a commercial money order make a written record of the transaction and require the bearer to provide full identification.

Smuggling undermines Peru firms

By Truman Becker

Lima, Peru

Smuggling is a big business in Peru. And it is having a serious effect on legitimate distribution channels.

According to Peruvian marketing experts, each piece of contraband represents a sale lost to the local distributor. Manufacturing companies are affected, too. Their competitors can bring in components with no duty cost and undersell them on the end product.

In Peru, contraband seeps in from all sides. In the north, it moves in from Ecuador and consists mainly of livestock, particularly beef cattle. Some estimates assert that about 30 percent of Lima's beef comes from cattle smuggled from Ecuador.

In the south, contraband comes in from Chile, mostly appliance goods. In the east, goods move in from Argentina. Peru's jungle town located at the mouth of the Amazon River.

Sources listed

Mostly fabrics, radios, duty-free differential increases come into Iquitos. Fabrics are smuggled from Colombia. Several of the remaining items come from Japan and are shown in plans.

Why has smuggling become so rampant in Peru? One marketing expert pointed out that, as duty differential increases between exporting and importing countries, smuggling becomes more attractive. He added that smuggling has become particularly attractive in Peru.

He said that smuggling has increased last July and since nonessential imports were recently barred for three months.

Another marketing expert said that the devaluation of the sol last September has had the effect of making imported goods more expensive, thus tending to increase smuggling. He demanded that the export control writely that "smuggling is just another form of business opportunity for those who care to take the risks involved."

Ring uncovered

Recently, the Peruvian Government uncovered an international smuggling ring which had been employing Peruvian customs officials to smuggle contraband goods.

The Peruvian customs officials had been charged at a recent airport along the Peruvian coast—and at the Lima International Airport, with the assistance of custom officials.

During 1967, RITSA planes made an estimated 30 flights to Peru, carrying about 7,000 kilos of cargo on each flight. The value of the smuggled goods ran into millions of dollars.

So far, about 80 arrests have been made by the police, and a score of ring-leaders have reportedly fled the country. A special investigating operation of the Chamber of Deputies is inquiring into the ramifications of the RITSA contraband operations and of the illicit customs operation.

The investigation has uncovered illicit units returning from foreign cruises. The charges are countercharges they have involved a number of high government officials.

ORIENTAL RUGS

IT TAKES MORE THAN MONEY TO FIND THE ORIENTAL RUGS FOR OUR TRADE. We personally search the oriental bazaar, exercising mental gymnastics with the natives in Armenian, Turkish, Persian, Afghan and English to obtain the best rugs for the lowest possible prices. Every transaction turns out to be a happy experience both for the seller and for us, celebrated with much hand shaking. Although there are many oriental rugs for sale, we choose only those that meet the critical approval of two generations of Gregorians.

In essence, we are acting as your agents in these foreign lands, hoping that you will share our enthusiasm and taste.

Tolkien disguised as himself

The Tolkien Relation, by William Reddy.
Chicago: Henry Regnery Company, $3.95.

By Peter J. Henneker-Heston

For everyone who hopes to be around in 1970 and after, the Tolkien books are essential reading. The virtues and values of his Hobbits and their Rivers and their Ents, of their Ringwraiths and their Orcs, will need to be clearly understood and grasped within the decades immediately ahead of humanity. They tell of power, the misuse of power, and the requirement that, to avoid its corruption, power be willingly surrendered.

Three million copies of a man's works, maybe five million by now, sold mainly on the campuses of the United States, constitute a figure and a fact not to be laughed off. The man is J. R. R. Tolkien, professor of Anglo-Saxon and thereafter of English Literature in the University of Oxford, now in retirement on the city's outskirts.

Slow-burning fuse

Once upon a time (which by today's time-scale means between 20 and 30 years ago) Professor Tolkien wrote "The Hobbit," which for protective coloring he called a "children's book." This is followed by a trilogy, entitled "The Lord of the Rings"; its three parts are "The Fellowship of the Ring," "The Two Towers," and "The Return of the King." Children delight in these three as really children's books at all. They are books of unalloyed delight, of profound intellectual and spiritual significance.

For some 20 years they sold slowly but steadily, mostly in Britain. Then the burning of the fuse reached its American destination. Some four years ago the fusion reaction began. The books have been exploding ever since.

William Reddy of McMaster University, Ontario, in "The Tolkien Relation" undertakes (according to the book jacket) to provide "a readable, understandable introduction to the man and his work." To say at once that this is nonsense is not to downgrade Mr. Reddy's work. The point is that Tolkien can never be understood; he must be experienced. Second, any one who reads Tolkien can only give the true flavor if it is rough-hewn, homespun, slightly unreadable. And third, Tolkien never waits to be introduced; he brushes past his introducer and presents himself three-dimensional and four-square. All that Mr. Reddy wisely does is to hold open a door through which his subject may enter.

Courage—main or loss

This book discusses Tolkien as a man and describes his ecology, South Africa, Oxford, and various points in between, but especially Oxford. It also discusses Tolkien's thought and the thought behind his thought and those activities of the mind and spirit that operate behind and below a writer's thought. It all adds up to a cold shower for those who think Bacon was Shakespeare; the Tolkien described in these pages could not possibly have written Tolkien. Genius is something other than its vehicle. And while "The Hobbit" may be only near-genius, "The Lord of the Rings" is a story outside time and space and rational situation which means genius. The virtue of Mr. Reddy is that he knows the size of his subject and therefore does not concern himself with a "petty consistency." From chapter to chapter he is seduced by Aunt Martha. She decides that self and is the greater for so doing. Perhaps what emerges most strongly from these contrary sides is Tolkien's preoccupation with the Norse virtue of courage, or, for the sake of the story, the joy of courage in war. For, like the Tolkien brand of courage, the Hobbit brand of courage, ever does anything but win; yet the winning remains implicit.

Mr. Reddy quotes Tolkien's words: "It is not our part to master all the fates of the world, but to do what is in us for the success of these years wherein we are set." The Hobbit, as Mr. Reddy also points out, is "Everyman," shaken from . . . his little ways." In the years behind "The Lord of the Rings" will help us with delight and courage "to do what is in us for the success of these years wherein we are set." It is a most valuable unadorned introduction to Tolkien lore.

Nabokov's game of hearts

King, Queen, Knave, by Vladimir Nabokov.
New York: McGraw-Hill, $5.95.

By Judith Rascoe

Novel game is Nabokov's second novel in Russian, his first literary language (thirty years ago this year, with "The Eye" of Sebastian Knight; he did it grandly, in English). He wrote it in 1928, when he was 30. Dmity, have you seen his son, Dmitri, have you seen him in English, and nothing suggests a more cordial Russian origin than the prose.

A young man named Dmity leaves his hometown in Germany to work in his uncle's department store in Berlin. Sir Franz is seduced by Aunt Martha. She decides that self and is the greater for so doing. Perhaps what emerges most strongly from these contrary sides is Tolkien's preoccupation with the Norse virtue of courage, or, for the sake of the story, the joy of courage in war. For, like the Tolkien brand of courage, the Hobbit brand of courage, ever does anything but win; yet the winning remains implicit.

Of Madame Martha: "Neither aesthetic nor emotional considerations ruled her taste; she simply thought that a reasonably wealthy German businessman . . . ought to have a house exactly of that sort, that, belonging to the same suburban type as his fellow's." She does know, passionately, the financial details of her husband's will.

Mechanical devices

The only one with an imagination of sorts is oblivious Uncle Dreyer, whose attention is divided between himself and an insane invention: self-propelled, mannequin-covered with a creepily fleshlike substance called "waxkin."

The King, the Queen, and the Knave—automannequins in a play city. The householder's mother is a grey wig, prepped on a stick. Dreyer's former mistress gets her penultimate glimpse of him at a play called "King, Queen, Knave"; Nabokov and his wife turn up at the fashionable Graviton street and drift past Franz through their butterfly net and incomprehensible language.

Perhaps one reason for Nabokov's thorough and noisy dilapidation for Freud & Co. is that he and Freud are the port-folled representatives of the major powers (Freud and Psychology) competing for control and exploitation of the natural resources of the dream and the "Bend Sister." Nabokov does a good deal more with the logic and imagery of dreams, but there are hints of his avocations in "King, Queen, Knave": Franz's nightgown awakening in Berlin, and Martha's delirium in Graviton.

Not for the screen

In this book Nabokov's ability to animate the inanimate world predominates, as if he were an extraordinary child who saw things with unusual clarity; and yet a movement of his eyes can set chains, mirrors, and whole railway stations in motion. At times it's as if in English but human life in the second language and he waxes at the wondrous game of an essayist from Marx.

Every now and then (and after all, this is an early novel) I was distracted by the various devices to keep the reader entertained while he shuffled his cards—changes of tense, mimicry, optics. But even the end I got a little bored with the game. The characters are genuine parable-board, the plot is parody. It's not uncommon to want to leave the novel, but it's a comedy; you don't even the talented young author's talk of turning off the plot.

One way I kept myself alert to the end was by trying to imagine what an awful game.

From the children's bookshelf

The Madsters, by Richard Armstrong (Harcourt, $2.95). A group of rebellious teenage boys seek refuge on a desert island where they must fend for themselves. With this situation for a springboard, Richard Armstrong launches into a turbulent narrative that leads up, not down, to a conflict between two of the boys who symbolize the opposing forces generated by the mad and the sane and those who build, in "Lord of the Flies," the island struggle was between anarchy and civilization, and there was a general retreat before the heart of darkness. Here, in spite of the surface violence, the book's underlying message is not so gloomy as William Golding's. True, the weak are swallowed up in a cataclysm they bring upon themselves, but there is at least one who learns the fundamentals of survival: the inner strength accepts involvement and responsibility, and finds that when compassion comes into the act the world seems a better place after all.

Walt Disney

Pop-art as king

The Disney Version, by Richard Schickel.
New York: Simon and Schuster, $5.95.

By John Allen

When seeking political office was once suggested to Walter E. Disney, his reply was: " . . . why should I run for mayor when I'm already king?"

The remark says a good deal about Disney and his concept of himself, but it also provides a clue to the tone of "The Disney Version." Richard Schickel's somewhat devastating biography of an American folk hero, Mr. Schickel, who is a film critic for Life magazine, has written his book as the latter-day equivalent of the child who no longer that the emperor's new clothes left the emperor decidedly exposed.

There are some twists to the story, however. The emperor in the fairy-tale was sold a hangerful of nothing by shifty businessmen. Walt Disney on the other hand was a self-made king and emperor in the best American sense who did his own tailoring and was misled only by himself. He never by his admirers (and there is all of us) were never forced to cover up for that.

Mr. Schickel's deceptively innocent exposure of the emperor's child who no longer that the emperor's new clothes left the emperor decidedly exposed.

states at the outset that his biography is not so much of a man but of a type.

Writing the biography of a type rather than a man, however, is a delicate task. If the emphasis throughout is nonetheless on a single man or a type, the man begins to look like a scapegoat. Thus one could wish that Mr. Schickel's diatribe against middle-class values was addressed less obliquely to a more thoughtful appraisal of the unique qualities that enabled Disney to get to the head of his particular class.

Understanding the product

The book has other shortcomings besides its indirectness. There is a vague discomfort, for instance, in feeling that the reader is still getting little more than an image of Disney, even if the image is more accurate than the "official" one. Mr. Schickel has been forced to reconstruct Disney's life and work from discussions with disgruntled employees and by researching his way through popular magazines. Such sources do not provide the basis for a definitive study.

But the blame does not fall to Mr. Schickel. The Disney organization itself, eager to preserve whatever is left of its crumbling image, has been very busy in the very source of information that could have made possible a more accurate and more revealing study.

The "Disney Version" is an invaluable beginning, however, to cutting through the dusty layers of unthinking and uncritical acceptance that have helped obscure the artistic and ideological merits and shortcomings of the Disney product. If Mr. Schickel has done no more than to highlight the fact that it is basically a product—mass-produced and standardized, machine-made and meant for easy consumption and steady profits—then he has performed an invaluable service.

Bought smiles

He has, of course, done more. Whatever the ultimate accuracy of his intuitive judgments proves to be, he has made a statement demanding thoughtful reexamination of an entire set of beliefs shared by millions with such zealous approaching ideology.

"The Disney Version"—a book that questions a way of life and a system of values both exemplified and exploited by Walt Disney—has done no more than to highlight the fact that it is basically a product—mass-produced and standardized, machine-made and meant for easy consumption and steady profits—then he has performed an invaluable service.

Poet with a bee-stung pout

The Survival of the Fittest, by Pamela Hansford Johnson. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, $5.95.

By Melvin Maddocks

Pamela Hansford Johnson has written one of those novels that seem to come with a key taped to the dust jacket. When she was a precocious young poet and novelist—long before she became Lady Snow—Miss Johnson corresponded with Dylan Thomas. "The Survival of the Fittest" transparently features a stormy, curly-haired, handsome poet with eyes like "chestnut fire-cores" (a cross between an infant saint and a Koolhaas bear) who makes notorious reading tours of American campuses while caringening to his premature cod.

Jazz musicians and lyric poets who drink themselves to an early grave are pothetically guilty of a lengthening sheet of bad novels and plays. They wear that obviously ravaged look of the artist-as-martyr who appeals to stolid or second-rate fictionists hunting for ready-made melodrama with a built-in moral.

Detailed background

Miss Johnson, an industrious and capable writer, partially escapes the inherent cliché by trying to subordinate her Kit Mallings, insofar as he can be subordinated. She spends a good deal of time and care, for instance, on backgrounds. With considerable vividness and detail she reconstructs the generous, vulnerable responses of young English intellectuals to the Spanish Civil War. From this high pitch of youth and passion, she dims the lights for World War II ("the world was darkening, and they knew it"), and eases her "wild celt" into his progress, middle-aged domesticity after the war.

Miss Johnson further disguises the rather crude simplicity of the doomed-artist legend by surrounding her Orpheus with a large supporting cast, including a best pal of Kit named Jo to whom she would dearly love to award her novel on grounds of personal merit.

Looking back only

She has all her other characters say—and say again—that Jo is the noblest Bohemian of them all. Parity by association with a horribly possessive mother, she gives Jo a biographical substance: the seven volumes for Kit. In the end, she kills off Jo too-martyred friend to match martyred artist. What more can an author do to over-compensate?

But all this desperate diversification is in vain. Curly-headed poets with eyes like "chestnut fire-cores" do not easily give up front-stage center. They are as sedulously demanding in fiction as they can be in life. For better and for worse, the novel has to rise and fall with Kit. The women he loves and generally mistreats, the men who play his admiring and envious strokes live as reflections of his ego rather than as characters on their own. And finally the subject of Sun-King-art has a banality that Miss Johnson's subtleties cannot refine. Kit Mallings with his bee-stung pout right over the novel like the spoiled child in a permissive family.

There is something quaint now—something a little velvet-collared—about portraits of the artist as a mad young man. Miss Johnson's frequent use of "wild" to describe an extra round or two at the pub seems almost touchingly innocent.

It is as if she had run through a tattered suburban attic, and with the help of souvenirs, recalled a long-ago moment of vertigo. With decency and honest concern, she has written about the past as though she were trying to explain her younger self to her children, or perhaps to the Lady Snow she has become. Such a recollection is not without interest, but it seems too remote for passion. Kit Mallings ends up as the cool Greek profile carved on the old family camera.

Bargain, bargain, who's got it?

Candid consumer

By Yvonne Horton
Home economics editor of
The Christian Science Monitor

Riddle: "When is a bargain not a bargain?"

Answer: "When you don't need it."

Sometimes free gifts are nonbargains, too, as illustrated by these excerpts from a reader's letter.

"In conversation with friends and neighbors, there has often cropped up the question of whether or not to continue sending in labels, tops, etc. from products in exchange for monetary refunds or coupons for free products. Some women said they kept no track of what they sent in but had noticed any discrepancy in the returns; but the majority seemed to feel that they were sending in more 'money back' requests than they were receiving. 'In the course of six months,' I sent in 25

'money back' or 'free-product' coupons and made a typewritten list. . . . Of the 25 I sent in, I received 12 returns. Some took up to three months to reciprocate; some never did."

"What experience have [other readers] had with the percentage of returns from offers? Does it really pay to pursue this line of refund with meager returns? It certainly lowers your all-over return when you figure [the mailing costs of unanswered refunds]." (Mrs. K. G. S., Minneapolis)

You are right in realizing that "free" products do involve some expense—certainly to the manufacturer, and often to the consumer. If the desired end were only to give a consumer a present, a manufacturer might, as well mail one to each 500th (for example) name in a telephone book.

Sometimes it helps to ask yourself: "What does the manufacturer expect from me in return for this free(?) gift or coupon?"

Did I buy more, or bigger, oranges because I'm getting 25 cents back? Have I given his new brand or product a fair trial before deciding whether to buy it?"

A manufacturer should keep his promises about coupons, as well as about other things. But each case needs to be judged on its own merits.

"Could you tell me how long it is safe to keep opened evaporated milk in the refrigerator?" (Mrs. D. A. F., Coast Bay, Ore.)

Refrigerated evaporated milk will keep about a week. If the milk is always kept cold it will stay sweeter longer than if it is sometimes allowed to stand at room temperature.

One home economist who works for a dairy council reports that she has kept evaporated milk, opened, for as long as 10 days by taking it out of the refrigerator only long enough to pour out the

Let's have corned beef. It has a broader scope than New England boiled dinner. There is even more to it than the popular Reuben sandwiches although the multi-thin slices of corned beef layered with sauerkraut and Swiss cheese on rye bread are hard to beat.

Corned beef is so readily available in plastic sacks in all meat markets these days that you are alighting yourself if you do not develop a corned beef repertoire. Let's start "from scratch." There will be directions on the package for boiling the meat. The length of time will vary with the weight of the meat, of course, but you should count on at least three hours. In the warm summer months it can be cooked in the cool of the evenings or early mornings. Some meat companies produce a corned beef package which they recommend baking, so check the directions.

Remove the plastic bag, cover the corned beef with water (no salt needed). You have a choice of seasonings. Two or three garlic cloves, three or four cloves, one good sized onion, sliced; and six or seven pepper-corns are basic. Two or three lemon slices add zest, and if you like bay leaf you may add one or two. Simmer gently until tender, when tested with the tines of a meat fork. Then either lift out of the liquid and drain or take out the meat just before completely done and glaze it.

Orange-glazed corned beef

4-5 pound corned beef brisket
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed

1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon prepared horseradish

Orange slices for garnish

Cook corned beef brisket as directed on package label (or as suggested above). Drain and place meat in a shallow baking pan. Mix brown sugar, orange juice concentrate (undiluted), mustard, and horseradish. Brush meat using half the glaze. Place in 400 degree F. oven for 10 minutes. Spoon remaining glaze over meat, and return it to oven for 10-15 minutes, or until completely tender. Slice thin across the grain. Garnish with orange slices. Serves six to eight persons.

Now that you have your barbecuing equipment ready to use, you may want to finish up the corned beef on the rotisserie for the addition of the smoky taste of the charcoal. Start with it "heavily done," spear evenly on the spit and brush frequently with the orange glaze for at least a half hour until thoroughly tender. Or use a basic glaze:

WOMEN TODAY

Basic glaze

1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1/4 cup brown sugar, or dark syrup or honey
1 tablespoon dry mustard, or 3 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 garlic clove or 1 teaspoon ginger, or cinnamon, or 1/4 teaspoon allspice

If you find Hungarian-style mixed pickles in your market you can plan a wonderful "one-plate" meal around a boiled corned beef brisket. If you cannot find these pickles make your own concoction by mixing a small can of sauerkraut with a jar of dill pickles, adding green tomato pickles and peppers if available. Let them stand together at least overnight. Add equal parts of vinegar and water to make a complete cover of juice.

Place the well-drained corned beef in the center of your most attractive platter and surround it with a mound of the Hungarian pickles, a stack of thinly sliced Swiss cheese, and piles of dark rye bread. Always sliced very thin. If you have time to let it cool thoroughly, even stand in the refrigerator, before slicing cross-grain. Reheat by wrapping it in foil and placing in a 350 degree F. oven for about a half hour, or until even the middle slices are hot. What a perfect summer supper or Saturday lunch.

Molded corned beef salad

1/2 cup corned beef (or 1 can) crumbled
2 cups finely cut celery
1 cup mayonnaise

1/2 cup chopped dill pickle (sweet, if taste prefers)
4 hard cooked eggs, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon horseradish

1 small can chopped ripe olives

Mix these ingredients and add to conventional gelatin recipe dissolved in 1/4 cup cold water, then add

1 1/2 cups hot tomato juice
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt

When this begins to thicken, add corned beef mixture and mold into individual molds, a ring mold or fancy salad mold. Serves eight to 10.

Jingle of silver tempts speculators

By David R. Francis
Business and financial correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

New York
The subway-token clerk plunked down 880 in rolls of silver quarters and dimes. Richard Graf, secretary-treasurer of Graf & Sons Coin Corporation, picked them up and emptied them into a counting machine.

The clerk, who had just received the coins, then he paid the clerk $84.50. "He never gives me back any silver coins," his change was in gold coins.

Across the country, similar transactions are repeated hundreds of times a day in coin shops. Dealers are offering a 6 percent premium on real-silver coins. Thus many cashiers, newsstand dealers, confectioners, laundromat operators—anyone who handles considerable change—are segregating silver coins from the other coins.

'Ceiling punctured' High-rise wage pacts cause U.S. concern

By Ed Townsend
Labor correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

New York
There is wide agreement outside the ranks of organized labor that something should be done about high-rising contract settlements. But nobody appears willing and able to tackle the job. Any major effort to restrain settlements would involve a hard fight, political or economic, that nobody wants to start.

Recent telephone wage agreements pushed the level of labor settlements to a new high of 4.5 percent a year. That's double the annual figure of 2.2 percent the President's Council of Economic Advisors (CEA) don't Council of Economic Advisors (CEA) still defends, however, as a policy of the limit if raises are to be noninflationary.

Since CEA first advocated a policy of holding increases to long-term productivity gains—the 3.2 percent wage "guideline"—figure—union pressures have punched big holes in CEA's ceiling.

The United Automobile Workers of America negotiated, in 1964 bargaining with America's negotiators, increases "big three" auto manufacturers, increases that averaged 4.7 to 5.2 percent a year over three years.

Under White House pressure, the United Steelworkers of America in 1965 settled for an average close to CEA's guideline, although for just over 3.5 percent.

In 1966, railroad shopcraft unions held out for 5.6 percent annually.

Then, last year, UAW negotiated a 6 percent raise.

This past January, United Steelworkers and other unions with new contracts to negotiate set sights a little higher. They negotiated 7 percent a year. The Steelworkers' and copper settlements topped 6 percent, and the Communications Workers of America has nudged the level up fractionally to 6.5 percent.

The Johnson administration has made no secret of its alarm. The President recently warned that excessive wage settlements could imperil efforts to regain price stability.

New appeals made
The President avoided a direct reference to the telephone settlements in new appeals to management and labor to "make a decision turn back toward price stability." In an address to businessmen at Hot Springs, Va., he called on them to consider the overall state of the economy in making their decisions of 1968 on wages and prices. And he called on the steel industry and United Steelworkers to avoid the dual dangers of a costly strike and an inflationary settlement.

Arthur M. Okun, chairman of the CEA, similarly has expressed grave concern over the wage-settlement trend. He warned last week that inflationary settlements that endanger the economy must be checked—either through some new form of voluntary labor-management cooperation, although the administration and CEA prefer guidelines policy is contemplated. Mr. Okun's reference to some "new form" of "voluntary" restraints has been interpreted as a hint that controls might yet be revived in some different form than in days of the 3.2 percent policy.

Actually, the administration's worries are more over the trend of construction-industry settlements than those of industry generally. There are two reasons.

According to the President's Cabinet Committee on Price Stability, building trades settlements have been accelerating since 1964 and have consistently exceeded the national average. Government figures show that the national average of first-year wage increases negotiated in 1967 was 5.1 percent, while construction settlements averaged above 7 percent. Settlements usually provide for a larger wage increase in the first year. The

BUSINESS

The subway clerk said he made an extra $12 a week this way. But the amount was declining. Silver coins, especially quarters, are rapidly disappearing from circulation.

U.S. ban imposed

"Now it's nearly all dimes," noted a candy-counter operator. He had a pocketful of rolled dimes and some quarters. In turn, the dealers are selling the silver coins at a profit to speculators. Mr. Graf was offering a $1,000 bag (face value) of coins at $1,175 or a $500 bag at $575.

The speculators, mostly businessmen, are gambling that the federal government may end its ban on melting or exporting silver coins. The penalty for a violation of the law is severe.

If the administration does relent, the speculators stand to make a handsome profit at present silver prices. The silver content of a silver quarter, for instance, is worth about 41 cents. A $1,000 bag of those coins contains about $1,640 worth of silver.

So far, though, there are no signs of the government's changing its mind.

Stated Robert A. Wallace, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury: "Among many members of Congress, members of the Coinage Commission, and Treasury officials, there is a distinct lack of sympathy for those who engage in hoarding and speculation in silver coins."

Mr. Wallace says he would rather have the government and taxpayers reap the substantial profit from melting the coins and selling the silver.

Change in law asked

Rep. James A. McClure (R) of Idaho last month introduced a bill that would legalize the melting of coins by private citizens. The bill would allow a person to melt a coin that he has in his possession, provided that the coin is not a "gold piece."

Curiously, both producers and consumers of the silver would like the bill removed—but for opposite reasons.

Producers want to get the government out of the silver business. They figure stockpiling the precious metal. They figure that the hoards of silver coins are hoards of the price of silver in the market.

Consumers reverse the argument. Says Handy & Harman, a leading retailer, processor, and fabricator of silver: "We believe that if the ban places artificial restrictions on the free flow of silver to the market and thereby encourages speculation."

The supply and demand factors are complex and, in certain aspects, contradictory. World consumption substantially exceeds new production. In 1967, total coinage production was 186.5 million ounces, new production just 213.4 million ounces, according to Handy & Harman statistics.

The difference was made up primarily from United States Treasury stocks. Sold from the Treasury, the Soviet Union, and other foreign governments added lesser stocks to the supply.

ventory accumulation were huge last year—120 million ounces.

Though silver no longer has any ties with the monetary system, it does gold, the demand for silver varies with confidence in paper currencies. Weakness in the dollar, the government's position is critical.

The Treasury has about 500 million ounces of silver in one form or another. About 225 million of this total coin silver. It is 80 percent silver, 10 percent copper.

In addition, the Treasury itself, through the Federal Reserve, is authorized to pick up silver coins. On the demand side, the government offers 2 million ounces of silver to industrial consumers each week.

Some 165 million ounces of silver is to be transferred to a defense stockpile on June 24. Most of this will be .999 fine silver.

The third major silver obligation is for the redemption of silver certificates. During the past 11 months, the Treasury has exchanged over 43 million ounces for obsolete currency. Demand stepped up from 7 million ounces a month to 10 million in March and April.

Doing a little subtraction, Mr. Wallace reckons the Treasury will have about 325 million ounces left on June 24. This, he says, would be sufficient to permit sales to industrial users at the present rate for another three years at least.

These sales could be extended if government silver coinage recoveries are larger than expected. When the amount of silver in the quarters drops below 2 percent of the total, government collection costs are expected to drop. The profit on their silver content.

Also restraining price increases are an estimated 30 million ounces in pure silver held in banking vaults upon delivery of maturing silver futures contracts. Private buyers of silver coins have their hoards, too.

One source said New York vaults are "bulging" with silver.

So are piggy banks in many homes. But coin dealers say they get relatively few of those piggy-bank silver coins.

The Coinage Commission meets again July 14. By then the uncertainty over the amount of silver certificates to be redeemed will be removed. But other uncertainties will remain.

For instance, just how many silver coins will the government demand? What will the government do about the ban? Will the demand for silver decline as it did in previous years? Or will it go up as it has in previous years?

Said one expert: "No one really knows what is going to happen."

Trial delay called threat to courts

By the Associated Press

Washington

Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, says there is a critical backlog of cases in the federal courts and that delay in bringing cases to trial may allow criminals to run loose.

"Unless we have better management," Chief Justice Warren said, "the future of our judicial system is in danger."

Chief Justice Warren told members of the American Law Institute in a speech that delays caused by court congestion are reaching two years in some criminal cases, and noted that "speedy apprehension and conviction of criminals is one of the surest deterrents to the commission of crime."

Chief Justice Warren said "there is no single thing the courts could do which would contribute more to the war on crime than to see that defendants are given a speedy trial and appeal."

Noting that the number of appeals filed in the federal court system is up 88 percent above the number filed seven years ago, he said conditions are "ominous for the future."

"Delays in reaching trial, resulting as they do in forcing and missing witnesses, increase the probability that the defendant though guilty will not be convicted," he said.

Trial delays criticized

Chief Justice Warren added that defendants held in limbo for long periods of time or out of jail are, if innocent, deprived of life and liberty without cause. "In many instances we know the delay provides the means by which a defendant can be convicted and in jail an opportunity for the commission of new crimes," he said.

Chief Justice Warren also hit at the long delays in civil cases, and while these cases do not represent "the life and liberty of the parties, they often represent suffering and financial loss which a humane society should not tolerate."

Chief Justice Warren listed as reasons for the long delays the increased complexity of cases being tried in federal courts, the expanding technology and its impact on court cases, and recently enacted laws providing for bail reform and free lawyers for the poor.

But he also placed some of the blame on lawyers who "delay trials in order to defeat the ends of justice."

Conductor
Danny Kaye is seen giving vigorous downbeat to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

FAMILY FEATURES

Rowing ambassador for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, Danny Kaye explains to American children the work of UNICEF. Mr. Kaye's support of the fund is so enthusiastic that he was requested to accept for UNICEF the Nobel Peace Prize.

UNICEF

The many faces of Danny Kaye

By Thelma Winkler Orenstein

Danny Kaye is a chameleon, buffoon, philosopher, "an honorable man." He is truly a delight.

Compassion is one of his admirable characteristics. Kindness is another of his qualities—taking precious time, for instance, from an incredibly taxing schedule, to insure that a teen-ager traveling alone is seated beside him. Soubriety certainly isn't one of his attributes; he treats his employees as associates. When he's fatigued, he confesses he becomes difficult and somewhat "erably." But relaxed and rested, he's extremely friendly and spontaneous.

The term "glamour boy," as Hollywood defines it, doesn't fit him. His real personality is rather an antithesis of his role as a relaxed entertainer. He is serious about his work to the point of perfection and self-sacrifice.

Mr. Kaye is a tireless supporter of many deserving organizations, especially those connected with children. His face lights up when he talks about various experiences he has had with children around the world.

Last summer, after spending five weeks entertaining wounded soldiers in Israel, Mr. Kaye made a hospital tour of Southeast Asia and a short visit to Expo. He then covered more than a dozen cities for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) for which he has worked for 14 years. Every October Mr. Kaye flies his own plane throughout the United States and Canada for the benefit of UNICEF's annual "nick or treat" program. In 1965, when UNICEF was named the winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, Danny Kaye was requested to accept the honor for them.

In addition to UNICEF and the United Jewish Appeal, he entertains regularly for the Musicians' Pension Funds and performs for servicemen in Vietnam.

During a period of six months, Mr. Kaye had been home a total of only 16 days at scattered intervals. Devoing himself unselfishly to humanity prevents him from spending as much time as he'd like with his daughter, Dena, a senior at Stanford University.

Following Mr. Kaye's itinerary with UNICEF, he joined "Gadna," the Israeli National Youth Orchestra and conducted their group across Israel, Europe, Canada, Mexico, and South America.

In June he stopped entertaining in Las Vegas and canceled another performance at Chichester, England, when the fighting broke out in Israel. Commenting on the antipathy of the British, he says, "It was either diversion for the ladies of Chichester or entertainment for the wounded Israeli soldiers. I had to make a decision; one has to follow the dictates of his own conscience, time the whole thing will be forgotten."

He hasn't worked professionally for more than six months, but expects to go back to films, as opposed to a weekly TV show. Presently Mr. Kaye is acting in a picture being made in France, "The Madwoman of Chailot," directed by Bryan Forbes. Produced by Warner Brothers, the comic fantasy also stars Katharine Hepburn, Yul Brynner, and Julie Boyer.

Danny Kaye firmly states that he will not consider entering the political field, but is pleased his capable contemporaries have been entertained. Asked which comedian he most admires, he says he has many favorites and feels that Red Skelton and Bob Hope are masters of their art.

Because he thinks the world's hope for future peaceful coexistence lies in working with the younger generation, Mr. Kaye conducts a concert in Jerusalem for Arab and Israeli children. "If they work together as little ones, maybe they can form some basis for understanding later as adults."

With Gadna, although he cannot read music nor play an instrument, he directs with gusto.

"Conducting is the greatest feeling of power in the world. Everybody in the world is a frustrated conductor. They have to learn to play an instrument, but I can live it out."

Mr. Kaye was asked what he thinks of the kids of today. He enthusiastically answered, "I think they're great!"

At the Gadna concert he shares conducting honors with the talented Shalom Ronit-Riklis. The musicians show far-above-average ability. All Eban, 17, son of Israeli foreign minister, Dr. Abba Eban, plays first clarinet with the group. They have a firing schedule; every night it's another place, an additional performance—traveling, practicing, performing over and over again. The purpose of this Gadna journey is to introduce people all over the world to this enthusiastic, dedicated youth symphony orchestra, to create good will among Jewish, Arab and other nations, and to raise badly needed funds for Israel. Since the United States was not included in their itinerary, tentative plans are being formulated to have them perform in major American cities this coming fall.

But Danny Kaye is the free-wheeling maestro of the show. The program in each city states, "The management does not assume responsibility for Mr. Kaye's part of the programme."

In Vancouver, everyone laughed when he announced he had been a guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. With a characteristic toss of his head, he stalked off the stage. He returned "crying" and vowed he had, in reality, directed the Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, London, etc. Symphony Orchestras. In one bit, he will imitate "a friend of mine who just became a father," conducting as if he were pushing a baby carriage, or "an acquaintance who used to be in the tenor-ial business," performing as if giving a shave. During a piece by Ravel, he jumps backwards down the steps of the stage into the crowd and does an oriental dance. At one point, over a musical malfunction, he and a player glare at each other. They leave simultaneously, a recording shot is heard backstage, and of course, the young performer returns.

On May 24 the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce is planning a gala event to honor Mr. Kaye, when he will be the first recipient of "Brooklyn's Favorite Son Award," which, in the future, will be an annual honor given to worthy present and former residents of Brooklyn. Mr. Kaye, raised and educated in the celebrated borough, is being cited as a dedicated humanitarian, international ambassador of goodwill, and one of the great entertainers of all time.

But Danny Kaye belongs to humanity as a whole. He is making this a better world to live in—for our generation, for our children's generation, and for posterity.

Uncle Sam's best seller on stamps

Weekly stamp column

The new edition of Uncle Sam's biennially best-selling publication, "Postage Stamps of the United States, 1947-1967," has just been released by the Post Office Department.

This 276-page soft-cover book illustrates and describes all U. S. postage stamps from 1947 through the Roosevelt regular stamp issued Dec. 28, 1967. Designers, engravers, day covers processed since February, 1953, are listed. Also included are printing plate numbers dating from the Columbian Exposition issues of 1903.

Nearly 14 million copies of earlier editions have been sold, and an unprecedented demand for this updated edition is anticipated from postage-stamp enthusiasts throughout the world.

Copies may be obtained by sending your order, accompanied by remittance of $1.25, to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

"China's most famous handicraft, 'A City of Canals,' is the subject of an extraordinary set of stamps to be issued on June 18, 1968. The original scroll, completed during the 11th century A.D., is 37 feet long and only one foot wide. It portrays the successive scenery of a river flowing through the ancient Chinese capital of Kaileng.

According to the World Wide Philatelic Agency, the last 11 feet of this masterpiece will be reproduced on a 5-1/2 inch stamp strip. The strip will consist of five imperforate stamps, each with a denomination of $5 (Taiwan currency). In addition there will be two stamps with denominations of $5 and $8 showing two other outstanding details of the scroll.

The set will be available at stamp dealers and the Stamp and Coin Departments of leading stores.

Dialogue with youth.

By Erwin D. Canham

Editor in chief

The Christian Science Monitor

Reader: The letter by Barbara B. of Columbus (May 13 Dialogue with Youth) describing smoking pot as "coming close to a spiritual experience" was shocking in its implications and your reply was exactly right.

However, your reevaluation of the legal status of marijuana by your readers doesn't certainly take into account a statement by Dr. Stanley Einstein, executive director of the Institute for the Study of Addiction, as quoted in a recent issue of McCall's: "No drugs are safe—not even marijuana. All drugs, including pot, can cause disorientation in even a slightly unstable personality; when you deal with drugs you can never predict consequences. Particularly, you can't predict which drug experimenter will get hooked."

I recently attended a business luncheon at which a Professor of Pharmacy from Ohio Northern University was the principal speaker. In commenting on the grave dangers there is an urgent need for more rigid laws to control the use of such drugs as marijuana and LSD which can take the user over the borderline into psychosis.

One of the facts that drugs are being vigorously pushed in virtually every high school and college in the country you cannot over-emphasize this danger in your Dialogue with Youth column.

Ray A. F.

Cleveland Hts., Ohio

E. D. C. I am grateful for these authoritative quotations. It is certainly true that drugs are being "pushed" in and around just about every high school and college in the United States, and in some other parts of the world as well. The motives are wicked. We must indeed help people to awaken to the dangers.

FOCUS on Africa

What's ahead...

Opponents of President Tubman are ruffling Liberia's relative calm.

But so far there is no sign that his hold on the government as an elected official—dating back to 1943—is slipping.

One of his opponents, Henry Fahnbulleh, is said to have circulated anti-Tubman tracts while he was Ambassador to Nairobi, Kenya.

This naturally rubbed Mr. Tubman the wrong way. Mr. Fahnbulleh goes on trial next month, charged with treason and plotting with the Chinese Communists to overthrow the President.

Mr. Fahnbulleh is not a member of Liberia's ruling caste of families—freed slaves who came from America to found the nation in the early 1800's.

His position is that Liberia should be ruled by the now more populous Liberians whose ancestors never saw a slave ship.

Tubman opponents criticize his close ties with Washington.

But two American Peace Corps workers who are said to have made anti-Tubman remarks in a classroom have been ordered to leave the country.

Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia are taking advantage of Moscow's preoccupation with the East-bloc ferment to tighten their own ties with Africa.

Trade specialists and diplomats from Yugoslavia are following up visits earlier this year by President Tito to nearly a dozen African nations.

Result: A wave of new trade and cultural pacts, plus more treks to Belgrade by Africans.

Yugoslavia, Moscow's old maverick, would like to emerge as the main champion of "democratic" socialism, which appeals to many African statesmen.

Czechoslovakia, Moscow's new maverick, is one of the few socialist countries with genuinely commercial (as opposed to political) interests in Africa. As far as Africa is concerned, Prague is playing cautiously its new independence from the Soviet Union.

But Prague Radio's high-powered African short-wave service assures its listeners that a "critical examination" of its foreign policy means no great change in its relations with third-world countries.

Paris

The ripples of the Paris talks are spreading wider as the two parties continue with their disagreements here.

In Moscow a meeting of the cochairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference—the Soviet Union and Great Britain—could have important repercussions here.

In Peking the Maoist leaders, who have officially ignored the Paris talks although they publicly advised the North Vietnamese not to negotiate, have begun to throw adjectives in this direction. The publication in Hanoi of news from the conference is noted here.

By initiating the visit of British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart, the Soviet leaders appear to have made their first modest but open move toward the West in recent weeks.

It comes at a time when the United States is urgently pressing Hanoi for some form of military "restraint" so that President Johnson could end the bombing of North Vietnam.

[Ambassador W. Averell Harriman of the United States and Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam met Wednesday for the fourth full-scale session of the Vietnam preliminary peace talks.]

The United States is known to have sought Soviet assistance privately on at least one occasion since President Johnson's March 31 speech, but with no result. Among other things the probably inappropriate.

Crime election issue

By Richard L. Strout

Staff correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

Washington

Sen. John L. McClellan (D) of Arkansas stood in the middle aisle of the Senate chamber, flailing his arms and speaking with a voice hoarse with passion as he assailed the Supreme Court of the United States.

A few minutes later, trim, young Sen. Joseph D. Tydings (D) of Maryland walked down the side aisle gesticulating with the glasses held in his hand to defend the high court.

The issue they debated was the right of criminal suspects to certain safeguards in the American judicial system.

By expansion, the issue also involves the position of state courts vis-à-vis federal courts; whether the present Supreme Court is "coddling" criminals; the ancient doctrine of Chief Justice John Marshall in McCulloch v. Maryland (separation of powers), and the red-hot political issue of crime in the 1968 presidential election.

The average age of the present Supreme Court is 64. Of the four seniors of the court two are 69, one is 77, and one is 82. The high court is delicately balanced in its view of the controversial issue of protecting suspects' rights.

Nixon raises issue

A key case — Miranda — was decided to 4 1966.

Normally a president names two judges in a four-year term, though this does not always happen.

What the abc e means is that the fall election, by its choice of president, may well decide the course of the Supreme Court by the addition of new members.

Richard M. Nixon has already raised the issue. In his 5,000 word statement on crime May 8, he criticized the present majority of the high court in the Miranda case, charged that "a majority of one" has erected a "barbed wire of legalisms" which has "effectively shielded hundreds of criminals."

Mr. Nixon said significantly that future presidents should "include in their appointments to the United States Supreme Court men who are thoroughly experienced and

With South African Airlines forbidden to overfly a number of black-African countries, it is currently obliged to skirt West Africa's hump, stopping at Portuguese airports in Angola and Cape Verde Islands.

The new route would be via Tehran.

Possible stops along the way: Salisbury, Rhodesia; Blantyre, Malawi; and the islands of Malagasy and Mauritius—both in the Indian Ocean.

These countries can be expected to ignore any sanctions against South Africa. They need all the business they can get.

For South Africans, the route would represent added security in a world increasing its pressures against their nation.

How and why...

Federal government sympathizers in Nigeria have accused Biafra of delaying agreement on the peace talks now under way in Kampala, Uganda.

As for choosing a site, it might have been true. But when it came to setting a date for the peace talks on the Nigerian civil war, both sides jockeyed for a date they hoped would give them a stronger position at the conference table.

The federal government in Lagos proposed May 27 to give Col. Benjamin Adekunle as much time as possible to take Biafra's major city, Port Harcourt.

Biafra, knowing the fall of its city was imminent, wanted a week earlier so the city would still be in its hands when the talks began.

As it turned out, Nigeria's Colonel Adekunle took the city even before Biafra's deadline of May 20 — with a day to spare.

As peace talks begin, the city is occupied by federal troops.

Algeria opposes a negotiated Arab-Israeli peace. So does Syria.

They mistrust United Nations special envoy Gunnar Jarring's peace moves.

This was the main reason behind Syrian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Makhoul's hurried visit to Algiers last week.

Algeria trains some of the Palestine Arab guerrillas earlier trained in Syria and operating from bases on Jordanian territory.

It is now likely that Algeria will join Syria and Iraq in efforts to unify both the regular Arab military commands and the Palestinian commando groups.

Whether these efforts are successful depends in part on Egypt's President Nasser. Egyptian leaders are dubious about unification schemes.

They feel both Syria and Algeria—where President Boumedienne recently narrowly escaped assassination—ought to deal first with urgent internal problems.

Oregon Senate race

Wayne Morse sat on a bench in the warm Oregon sun recently to a constituent's surprise.

Bob Duncan, half a state legislator, down the tuna cannery line, I recommend highly for Senate"—himself.

In their own styles these men are running for the same office. Both are well respected. One wins Oregon's Senate race this week will undoubtedly be this green-treed state. Morse is expected to beat Republican Wood this fall.

The Morse-Duncan race is a tense, close struggle of an aspiring new generation politician against what is virtually an Oregon political institution. And the issue clearly is the institution himself—Senator Morse.

A controversial figure

Bush-browed and blunt, Wayne Morse aptly personifies the Oregon political spirit. He is independent, controversial, maverick-minded, and a gadfly to presidents. And that is both his strength and his weakness.

He was one of the first doves to fly against the Johnson administration's Vietnam policy. He has been perhaps the war's most flame-tongued critic ever since.

Robert B. Duncan, 20 years younger than Mr. Morse, is a political pragmatist—and a good one. He was an Oregon congressman for two terms. In his first, the Capitol press corps voted him one of the four "outstanding freshmen congressmen."

In 1966 he threw that over to run for the Senate against Republican Mark Hatfield. He narrowly lost—by only 24,000 votes.

He carried the lance of administration

Mr. Nixon's support of Title II in the pending anticrime bill, undercutting recent Supreme Court decisions, which was the subject of the McClellan-Tydings clash, is warmly and even passionately opposed by some legal scholars.

Factions cross party lines

Before the vote Mr. Tydings put into the record a list of opponents of Title II — the board of governors of the American Bar Association, which sets policy for a membership of 150,000 lawyers; the American Law Institute; the Judicial Conference of the United States; 200 legal scholars from 43 law schools.

Two Democratic presidential candidates, Sens. Robert F. Kennedy of New York and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, were paired against controversial Title II. Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey has stated that he opposes it.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D) of Massachusetts charged Senator McClellan had "panicked against crime." Sen. Charles H. Percy (R) of Illinois, a possible vice-presidential candidate, voted "aye" to postpone action on Title II.

But a bipartisan group of angry senators including Everett McKinley Dirksen (R) of Illinois and leaders of the Southern conservatives vigorously disagreed.

Provision knocked out

In a voice hoarse with emotion Mr. McClellan cried:

"If this effort to deal with these erroneous court decisions is defeated every gangster and overlord of the underworld; every syndicate chief, racketeer, captain, lieutenant, sergeant, private, punk, and hoodlum in organized crime; every murderer, rapist, robber, burglar, arsonist, thief, and con man will have cause to rejoice and celebrate!"

The Senate knocked out of the crime-control bill a provision that would have stripped the Supreme Court of authority to reverse state-court rulings accepting confessions as voluntarily given.

The vote was 52-32 and followed votes making the voluntariness of confessions the only test of their admissibility in federal criminal trials.

The 5-to-4 Miranda decision requires that a defendant be warned by police on arrest that he has a right to remain silent; that anything he says may be used to his detriment; that he has the right to the presence of counsel while being interrogated; and that counsel will be provided if he is financially unable to retain one. It calls for procedures similar to those adopted voluntarily earlier by the FBI.

The Miranda case is only one of a series of rulings adopted by a reform-minded Supreme Court majority in the politically hazardous move to liberalize the rights of suspects in criminal cases.

The present high court has two members appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt, four by Dwight D. Eisenhower, one by John F. Kennedy, and two by President Johnson.

Whatever Congress does with the pending crime bill — possibly facing a presidential veto if it retains Title II — the ultimate trend of the closely divided court may depend on the fall election.

UN goal: self-rule speedup

The 'realists' are prepared to wait a few years. But the radicals take the General Assembly declaration literally. They want immediate independence for all non-self-governing peoples. Steering a steady course in these currents of contrasting opinions isn't easy. But Mahmoud Mestiri, chairman of the United Nations committee on ending colonialism, is managing it well.

TUNISIA'S MAHMOUD MESTIRI HAS TO CON- tend with many a challenge. As chairman of the United Nations committee for the ending of colonialism, this is to be expected.

But Ambassador Mestiri knows the moods of the blocs and alignments within the United Nations and accomplishes his task without ruffling too many feathers.

The West is often impatient with the United Nations and even with the committee over colonialism. Mr. Mestiri is aware of this. He may even sympathize. But to him the basic issue is unmistakably clear.

"The problem is not the merits or the demerits of colonialism, whether it is good or bad," he stated in an interview. "The General Assembly disposed of that issue eight years ago when it proclaimed colonialism was evil and that all territories under colonial administration should be granted immediate freedom."

countries. The economic interests under investigation are quite often American. The Western countries greatly resent the fact that these subjects are being examined and the way the committee goes about doing so.

The Committee of 24 has at times also expressed the desire to examine the situation of Puerto Rico but has yielded to the U.S. argument that the competence of the committee does not extend to self-governing territories — though Puerto Ricans are officially United States citizens. The Soviet Union, conscious that the Puerto Rican movement for independence takes inspiration from Fidel Castro, and having enough troubles as it is with Cuba, has not pressed the point too hard.

U.S. shows displeasure

The United States has often shown its displeasure with the committee's attitude and not long ago threatened to withdraw unless a more "responsible" attitude was taken.

Who is next?

Territories being considered by the "Committee of 24":

AFRICA: Ifni, Spanish Sahara, Portuguese territories, Rhodesia, South-West Africa, Equatoria Guinea, Swaziland.

EUROPE: Gibraltar.

SAUDI ARABIA: Oman.

PACIFIC: Fiji, Brunei (Borneo), Hong Kong, Gilbert Island, Ellice Island, Pitcairn Island, Solomon Islands, New Hebrides, American Samoa, Guam, Niue, Tokelau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, Papua, New Guinea.

SOUTH CHINA SEA: Brunei (Borneo).

ATLANTIC: Falkland Islands, St. Helena.

Transfer outlined

The General Assembly declaration was very specific. It stated:

"Immediate steps shall be taken, in trust and non-self-governing territories or all other territories which have not yet attained independence, to transfer all powers to the peoples of those territories, without any conditions or reservations, in accordance with their freely expressed will and desire, without any distinction as to race, creed or colour, in order to enable them to enjoy complete independence and freedom."

The Assembly declaration, he added, represents the framework within which the committee operates.

"I can only assume this premise is accepted by all countries agreeing to participate in the work of the committee, including the United States and the other Western countries," he stated.

During the eight years since the declaration was adopted some progress was made but not enough by far to satisfy a majority of UN members. While some small territories, mostly ministates, were granted independence the situation in the southern part of Africa has remained unchanged.

The fact that South-West Africa, Southern Rhodesia, and the Portuguese colonies of Mozambique and Angola are farther away than ever from gaining independence is causing considerable resentment.

Fundamentally, the contrast is between those who take the General Assembly declaration literally and the "realists." The former complain that all nonself-governing territories should have become independent eight years ago; the latter feel a few years more or less do not make that much difference.

Vicious circle exists

The first group comprises the Afro-Asians, usually joined by the Eastern Europeans and the Latin Americans. This coalition tends to isolate the Western countries. The latter react by knitting closely together and often take the attitude that since they cannot influence the committee why bother.

Western skepticism, which at times becomes uncooperation, in turn exasperates the Afro-Asians further. A vicious circle has thus been set in motion which might prove almost impossible to break.

The committee also is called "of the 24" by the number of countries comprising it. There are 13 non-aligned countries (Afghanistan, Ethiopia, India, Irak, Iran, Ivory Coast, Madagascar, Mali, Tanzania, Sierra Leone, Syria, Tunisia, Yugoslavia), five Western countries (Australia, United States, Finland, Italy, United Kingdom), three Eastern European countries (Bulgaria, Poland, Soviet Union), and three Latin American countries (Chile, Honduras, Venezuela).

The committee was established in November, 1961, to examine the application of the declaration and to make suggestions and recommendations on the progress of its implementation.

Khrushchev led move

The declaration was introduced by Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in person at the time he came to New York to lead the Soviet delegation to the 15th session of the UN General Assembly.

That was the year when most of the world's leaders—Nehru of India, Sukarno of Indonesia, Tito of Yugoslavia, Nasser of the United Arab Republic, Castro of Cuba, and many, many others—met in New York.

It also was the period when an avalanche of African countries had entered the United Nations and the African continent had become for the first time conscious of its weight in international affairs.

The Soviet Union has ever since used the committee as a platform for anti-Western, especially anti-United States, attacks. The language at times recalls the worst periods of the cold war. Moscow's main purpose is to convince the Afro-Asians and the Latin Americans that the United States is not sincere when it proclaims its support for independence in the nonself-governing territories.

The Soviets attach particular importance to two aspects of the committee's work—the role of foreign economic interests in preserving colonialism and the establishment of foreign military bases in Western

Analyzing the 'new poor'

By Jo Ann Levine

Most of these 20 quarrelsome essays have appeared previously in Dissent Magazine. The authors do agree on one point: poverty today is not the same poverty that Grandpa pulled himself out of by his own bootstraps and anybody who thinks it is stands lost in a "puritanical emotional fog."

One reason the essays are cantankerous while attempting to be—and being—constructive is that the authors spend a good deal of time lashing out at the "grandpas" in our society.

Unfortunately, these grandpas, or at least the grandpa-brand of thinkers, are the ones who have to finance America's social reforms whether they be massive or minor.

And they are the ones who still believe, along with the first American colonists, that "man has a religious duty to achieve material success and that giving direct financial aid to the poor destroys their character."

The unanimous view from the Left is that America has never resolved its own schizophrenic view of the poor which says that the poor are burdens as well as being honorable victims.

The book's authors agree that poverty in America for 35 million poor (poor is defined as an income under $3,200 a year for a family of four) is a disgrace. Grandpa, they charge, has been saying that the poor themselves are the disgrace and, he has helped to fashion the welfare programs accordingly—which means punitively.

Although the 20 authors do not agree on specific solutions for poverty, their solutions all come in the form of more money—given with more dignity and less strings attached.

The new misunderstood poor, say writers like essayist Michael Harrington, are caught in a "downward spiral of pessimism." He describes the poor as young, as being outranked by automation, and as living in a time when it is possible to have both "prosperity and decreasing opportunity for the poor."

After analyzing the "new poor," the authors look at them in scattered groups. Essays describe the aged, the hungry, the Negro, the grape-pickers in California, the Headstart children in Mississippi, the school children in Harlem, the captives on the "paleface reservations" in Appalachia, and the Crown and Zellerbach employees in the "company" town of Bogalusa, Louisiana.

The fact that Grandpa has perhaps self-righteously condemned the poor who are five Western countries (United Kingdom, Italy, United States, France, and West Germany) and three Latin-American countries (Bulgaria, Cuba, and Venezuela).

In November, 1961, the committee issued a declaration and recommendations on the progress of the committee.

Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev came to New York for the 15th session of the committee.

The world's leaders, including Khrushchev, Tito of Yugoslavia, Castro of Cuba, and others, participated in the session.

Obviously the U.S. does not enjoy being identified with the "colonial" countries which, being allies within the framework of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, it feels duty bound to support.

It is significant to point out that the United States' presence in Vietnam is not being considered a form of colonialism and lies therefore outside the competence of the committee.

Southern Africa represents the area of greatest concern to the committee and the United Nations as a whole. By and large the committee's members realize the complexities of the situation. There are hundreds of thousands of non-Africans who—unlike the white settlers in Algeria who could and did return to France—have absolutely nowhere to go.

There also is the danger, of which the UN receives ever-growing evidence, of a two-way racism such as Africa has never known before and which might generate irreconcilable hatreds. This in turn is bound to cause confusion and anarchy.

The committee, the General Assembly, and the Security Council have dealt with the issue at various times but never with any degree of success.

Another problem preoccupying the committee is that of the ministates. In fact, most territories under consideration by the Committee of 24 do not possess the main prerequisites for effective exercise of sovereignty.

The United Nations has often considered what its future would be if all the ministates were to be admitted within its framework. Pretty soon these ministates would acquire such unanimous voting strength as to represent a determining factor. This prospect is not of a nature to please anyone.

Ministate situation confused

The committee of 24, however, must examine the problem in the light of its own mandate, that is, independence for each and every nonself-governing territory, big or small. Some thought has been given to the possibility of attaching these territories to larger and well established geopolitical entities. This, however, would imply a renunciation of the principle of independence which the committee of 24 cannot entertain.

The situation of the ministates is thus very confused and will have to be faced realistically by the Security Council, which has established a committee to study the problem. Meanwhile it is felt the UN, through the committee of 24, should have a continued interest in the small nonself-governing territories, whether or not their independence is being contemplated.

Ambassador Mestiri is satisfied that, apart from the tragic situation in Southern Africa, progress is being made. Spanish Guinea is to acquire independence before July 15. On the other side of the map, progress is being achieved in the part of New Guinea under Australian administration.

Some progress noted

No progress is being made in Spanish Sahara where Morocco, Mauritania, and Algeria are in dispute. It is believed that a change in the status of the territory might cause tension among the North African states.

Britain, which administers most of the territories under consideration, cooperates with the committee even though for the time being it refuses to receive visiting missions from the committee of 24.

It does not recognize the competence of the committee in the issue of Muscat and Oman, which it considers an independent country. The majority of committee members feel that a protectorate such as France once established in Tunisia and Morocco is far closer to colonial status than to independence.

Another problem is that of the Fiji Islands where the indigenous population risks being reduced to a minority because of Indian immigration. The committee is divided as to the best way to protect the indigenous people.

In pursuing its work Ambassador Mestiri and the committee of which he is chairman have taken as a guideline the words of Secretary-General U Thant: "The United Nations stands for the self-government and independence of all peoples, and the abolition of racial discrimination without reservation. It can never afford to compromise on these basic principles."

given with more dignity and less strings attached.

The new misunderstood poor, say writers like essayist Michael Harrington, are caught in a "downward spiral of pessimism." He describes the poor as young, as being out-runk by automation, and as living in a time when it is possible to have both "prosperity and decreasing opportunity for the poor."

After analyzing the "new poor," the authors look at them in scattered groups. Essays describe the aged, the hungry, the Negro, the grape-pickers in California, the headstart children in Mississippi, the school children in Harlem, the captives on the paleface reservations in Appalachia, and the Crown and Zellerbach employees in the company town of Bogalusa, Louisiana.

The fact that Grandpa has perhaps self-righteously condemned the poor who are

"easy" victims, causes Jeremy Lerner, co-editor of this book, to lash out at the rich, a more elusive target:

"As far as looting is concerned," he says, "the Negroes are smalltime compared to American businessmen—and I don't mean the little shopkeepers either; I mean the swingers on Wall Street and the WASPs who head up our huge corporations. Which costs more—riots or oil depletions? Riots or drug mark-ups? Riots or market manipulations?"

Just to prove that this book isn't in print to set father against son, Stephan Thornstrom, associate professor of history at Brandeis University, refuses to subject himself or his readers to the social doldrums.

He writes: "I have never understood why so many Americans believe that to assert that things are bad, you must insist that they are getting worse. I would argue that they could well be getting a little better. . . ."

For the readers who may label as "far-fetched" the ideas put forward by those who view America's social problems from the Left, it may be surprising to learn that ideas—such as a guaranteed minimum income—are already sounding old. Only the implementation of them would be new.

Irving Howe, editor of Dissent and co-editor of this book, notes: "The programmatic demands advanced by the liberal left-groups for domestic reforms during the thirties have, by now, either been mostly realized or require merely—but that is some merely!—quantitative implementation."

If there is a fault in this book, it is in scorning the people who hold the means for "quantitative implementation." And if the "idea people" and the "money people" remain split over "who is to blame—the slum or the slum-dweller," the slum will continue to remain.

CLARIFICATION

The "OPINION" has made no intentional slanderous snipes at any individual involved in student government. IF any person has been unjustly accused of any act constituting poor judgement in execution of duties or otherwise, then apologies are herewith being extended to them, and only them. Correct implications are not being withdrawn.

Criticism had been rendered in rather generous amounts in previous literature distributed on the campus. It has been said that these earlier circulars attempted to force ideas on the students. Well, it should be remembered that it is up to these same students to accept or reject any ideas that are presented to them.

A number of hastily stated charges have been made against some factions at Muir for making attempts to "take over the government"; they are not true.

Criticism and praise has been and will continue to be rendered by the "OPINION", and no doubt against it, also. This is taken for granted. Your views are welcome.

TO WHOM DO THE CENTER BLEACHERS BELONG?

Seniors are currently discontented with the condition of Senior Privileges.....which are very apparent because of their absence.

If the center section of the bleachers is designated to Seniors, then WHY isn't there the smallest bit of enforcement of this favor?

What sort of a farce are the 12th graders falling for when they are supposed to be excused first at the end of each gathering yet they wind up swallowed by a mass of Juniors and Sophomores?

The earlier dismissal would seem to give the two lower groups a good chance and a good excuse to be late to class, wouldn't it? DISSENTING.....

Many Seniors think that the center section affair is stupid, but what else has been offered them? There is no choice involved!

Let's face it Seniors. It's there; there is nothing better in view. You can either take it or leave it.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF "BLAZER" WRITES OWN LETTERS TO PAPER

Reputable sources directly involved with the "BLAZER" and in student government, have informed the "OPINION" that the editor of page 2 of the former publication has written a number of letters to the "Letters to the Editor" column of his own paper. This makes us wonder if the "BLAZER" is sort of fan mail or if this sort of action is considered to be good journalism by those involved. The person in question, Keith McCormick, has adequate space in which to expound his views, both in the "BLAZER" and in the relatively unknown "ALTADENIAN". Let us hope that such dishonest and deceiving methods will hereafter cease. The tactics concerned were cheap and unethical.

...the very advent of life. Our subject question is: life is sacred, that all men are brothers under God, and that love is not hate, not fear--is the force that can bind you together in peace. What happens to us when we deny these values and give our moral approval to the mass extermination of others?

Our very survival depends not on Civil Defense, but on peace. It depends not on futile shelter programs inspired by a cavern complex but on solid, workable international agreements to disarm. We ought to be talking about building homes for our people rather than hoodlarking them with foolish prattle about underground shelter. We should be considering ways to feed two-thirds of humanity who go to bed hungry every night rather than telling them to store away a two-wheeled bicycle, to store in useless holes in the ground, instead of wasting untold millions on a national network of bomb shelters, we should put just a portion of these dollars into feeding hungry lips of friendship with our neighbor. The friendship we build can all contribute far more to our safety than shelters to jump into after it is too late.

Let us not crouch in dark holes in the ground, but let us stand in the sun, acquit ourselves as men, and devote our God-given hearts and minds to finding peaceful solutions to world's problems. It is our only permanent shelter. It is our only true defense.

American social life has recently been put under the critical eye of the sociologists. The American Academy of Arts and Social Science examined in a report entitled "Teen-age Culture" that there is nothing really wrong with America's youth. They are merely a product of a affluent society. Teenagers have become a huge market with an estimated sales potential of $10 billion a year in cosmetics, clothing, and consumerist lard that is so much long. Mass advertising has teenagers dressing, smelling, and eating alike. The report goes on to explain that this teenage "leisure class" demands a high degree of conformity upon pain of ostracism.

Despite the fact that the Academy's report will alarm few people, it is nevertheless of great significance to our society. For it reflects the basic theory of our economy, that capitalism promotes individuality and individuality.

One other contradiction of far greater seriousness is the existence of a "leisure class" disproving the contention that America is a classless society.

Young people are not able to escape the expensive pastime of status-seeking, and for this reason have created the gang, the delinquent, and the obscure. Even the poor cannot escape the far-reaching reaches of society. The complete these individuals with a bit of joke and grosses of dollars by mimicking the styles, coffee houses, and other non-conformist traits. The generation of young people substitutes prosperity for the old. This is an unavoidable fact.

The bourgeoisie of 19th century Europe are cultivated and that produces hate, and the bourgeoisie of nineteenth-century America produced the evil of Marxism. What will the struggle of 20th century America produce?

D-680606001 Q11 AT

...Communication Commission has just recently seen fit to criticize the present programming and past ethics of Pasadena's pride, radio station KRLA.

With its broadcasting studios located in the Huntington-Sheraton, the station has become one of the more listened to frequencies on the Southern California radio dial since its creation in 1959. It is currently being threatened with expulsion from the airways by the F.C.C., hence making chances for approval of a permanent license seem dim.

In this writer's opinion KRLA has been unfairly accused of "hoodwinking" the Commission with its broadcasting slate.

A second charge has insinuated discrepancies in a "Golden Key Contest" held two years ago on the "Perry Allen Show", who was a gimmick man, similar to KFWB's Gary Owens.

Allen long ago departed KRLA for more mellow radio, to trade for popular Winston. Conrad Martindale, who currently holds down the morning's breakfast time slot.

In regard to the station's programming, there seems to be no wider scope, ranging from live church broadcasts, to rock'n roll, to community forums, to some jazz, and to "Focus", heard each week night at 11:00 with guests often presenting very controversial topics and ideas. And how many of us can criticize "Let's Talk", on Sunday nights?

The only remark that 21-year-old evening favorite Jimmy O'Neil could make, because of station policy, was an understandable "No comment".

We hope that before April 16 (the presently scheduled last day for broadcasting), that the "No comment" will change to the tune of "No suspension!" This entire action certainly shows that the F.C.C. has been rather tardy in its area of jurisdiction. TWO YEARS TARDY!!!

NOW! Through the Incredible Power of—

MENTAL PROJECTION

—You Can "PROJECT" Things Metaphysically Right into Being!

Dear Friend:

Here's news about a revolutionary and potentially earth-shaking PROJECTION mechanism. It's based on a new metaphysical discovery, and is now available in a startling book.

It's true. The famous "20th Century Philosopher," Anthony Norvell, reveals one of the most astounding discoveries ever made: how to use a powerful PROJECTION mechanism to metaphysically transform your thoughts and desires into reality.

Called "MENTAL PROJECTION" this mind mechanism can change your entire life -- from the very first moment you turn it on -- money and power appear metaphysically, as if out of nothing.

The famous Anthony Norvell explains the transmutation techniques you need to work "MENTAL PROJECTION" -- and tells you with complete details:

- * How to tune into the "Music of the Spheres" the wavelength over which all "PROJECTION" takes place.
- * How to "PROJECT" yourself into "The Land of Beginning Again" and wipe out all your past mistakes and failure in a single blow, and start over with a clean slate.
- * How to "PROJECT" yourself through a mirror and come out with such dignity, such regal power no one will dare defy you.
- * How to write a sum of money on a slip of paper and "PROJECT" it into becoming yours.

Now I will give you a clear, scientific demonstration of the natural laws behind "MENTAL PROJECTION."

WHY YOU CAN TRANSMUTE THINGS INTO EXISTENCE!

For over 25 years Anthony Norvell searched the literature of all ages, travelled to corners of all parts of the earth. And throughout it all he looked for just one thing -- the power to turn thought into reality. Nowhere was the answer to be had. But finally he discovered that with a certain technique he could reverse important key laws of nature.

He discovered that he could make it just as easy to create matter, as it usually is to destroy it. It's easy to start out with something -- say a $100 bill -- put a match to it and end up with nothing. Now he found out, you can start out with nothing, AND END UP WITH SOMETHING.

He could hardly contain his excitement. He tried it once. It worked. He began telling others about it. It worked for them. He called it "MENTAL PROJECTION" and tried it on thousands of people no different from you.

USED BY THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE

- xx Jane Addams was given 6 months to live because she was chronically wasting away. But by giving away a certain part of herself, she was able to "PROJECT" herself practically a whole new body. She lived to bury four of her doctors.
- xx A woman was 76. She never had a trade or profession but always longed for one. She used The "Invisible Law of Mental Vibration" to "PROJECT" herself a talent. She became a great painter and made $1 million before she died at over 100.
- xx A young man was caught in a fire. His legs were just about burned away. Doctors feared he would die. He managed to pull through, but without hope of walking again. Yet by contacting the "Cosmic Mind" he was able to "PROJECT" himself a "new" set of legs. A few years later, in the world famous Madison Square Garden, he ran the world's fastest indoor mile.
- xx A man and his wife had little money. But they had their hearts set on owning their own home. They used the technique of "Centro-Dynamics" to "PROJECT" not just any old home, but their dream house. And they got it for what little money they had.
- xx A certain group of people had no future before them. No money. No contacts. No influence. Yet they wanted to be famous. They used "The Magic Circle" technique to "PROJECT" a great talent into their lives. Later, they all became famous movie stars. You'll recognize their names immediately.
- xx A man had no money all his younger life. His father died at a young age. His mother scraped along by selling biscuits to men for lunch. Then he used the Law of Capillary Action to "PROJECT" great wealth into his life. Before he knew it the biscuit business just grew and grew. He became a multi-millionaire.

Yes, "MENTAL PROJECTION" works. All you need do is use the specific techniques, for the specific things you want.

IT WORKS LIKE THIS!

"MENTAL PROJECTION" works by enabling you to shape the "protoplasm" that fills

HOW TO GET THE RICHES YOU WANT

In Anthony Norvell's amazing book you will read the incredible techniques you can use to gain wealth and prosperity almost overnight through the amazing power of metaphysical projection.

These methods enable you to use forces ordinarily beyond the reach of the average man. They heighten your powers to an amazing degree. You'll find that things you just couldn't accomplish before, suddenly become much easier.

You'll read how certain "Mental Projectors" put these forces under your command. And you'll see how they actually enable you to "PROJECT" the very things you've always wanted in life, but could never get.

You need no education, special skills or talents to work this miracle of power. Anyone at all can do it.

Yes, here at last, you'll see not only how to increase your money, but also how to attain satisfaction in work and play, long life, and the respect of others.

This book can lead you to the greatest harvest of riches you have ever heard of. Every minute you wait you are putting off the great day. Mail the card now.

18 Things You'll Find in This Book

1. The Cosmic Master Plan that guides your life. The Great Pattern. The Invisible law of mental vibration.
2. The land of beginning again. How to surround yourself with the Glowing Pattern of Greatness.
3. How to get back 10 to 100 times what you spend. The voice from the mirror. How to become an emperor.
4. The mysterious "instinct" within your cells. How to control your destiny. Getting help from the Cosmic Mind.
5. How to walk with kings and princes. The sixteen Great Visions.
6. The secret of Centro-Dynamics. How "magnetic tensing" calls power to you out of the air-Magnetic foods.
7. How to project your thought waves with Mental Projection. Using Invisible Atomic Action.
8. The magic power that builds new muscles and nerves.
9. How to hear the voice of The Spirit. The Power behind death.
10. The power behind the Throne of Life. The cycles and tides of fortune. The magic Scepter that brings food from the air.
11. How to "energize" your money. The mental vibrations that causes your money to be multiplied tenfold. The "money tree." Secrets of millionaires.
12. The Dream Ladder. How to use the Five Realms of Pleasure.
13. The Magnetic Voice. The Hypnotic Orb. How to extend the Golden Line of Power.
14. How to use psychic phenomena. How to discover your future. The secret of "natural prediction." How to project your thoughts into the minds of others.
15. The realm of the Absolute. Opening the secret door of consciousness. How to summon The Higher Power.
16. How to create miracles. How to increase the power of your senses. Imprinting your cells with power.
17. Channeling the Master Motives. The six "puppet strings" that control others.
18. Your mystic journey into future glory. How to achieve Darshan: The Ultimate Fulfillment of every secret dream.

THE FABULOUS CAREER OF ANTHONY NORVELL

For twenty-five years, a bronze plaque on the doors of New York's world-famous Carnegie Hall has commemorated the teachings of Anthony Norvell, one of the great minds of our time.

Over the years, tens of thousands have come to absorb his deep and profound wisdom — a complete and practical system of self-mastery and spiritual power that combines the Science of the West with the Mystic Knowledge of the East.

Norvell's deep thirst for spiritual fulfillment has taken him on travels to the most remote corners of the earth. He spent many years in India, where he studied with a noted guru (Holy Master). In North India, he later met a Tibetan monk from the Great Monastery at Lhasa, who revealed centuries-old secrets to him — the most sacred mysteries of the Orient, revealed in this book.

space. You start with nothing, and by simply reversing the appropriate natural law, you end up with something -- exactly what you want.

For example, you'll see how to use the following techniques to "PROJECT" meta-physically what you want:

1. How to "PROJECT" a much longer life for yourself -- 100 and over is not impossible -- by increasing your own personal charge of "magnetism."
2. How to "PROJECT" firmer lips, cheeks, smoother skin and a younger look, in general, through the technique "magnetic tensing."
3. How to "PROJECT" contact with the "Higher Mind" and get explicit advice on any problem having to do with family, neighbors, friends or bosses.
4. How to "PROJECT" and shape your future in the areas of finance and prosperity with the "Law of Predominant Impression."
5. How to "PROJECT" yourself a "Hypnotic Eye" which can wither and take over any opponent who dares look at it.
6. How to "PROJECT" an Invisible Golden Line of Power which can be placed in another person's mind.
7. How to "PROJECT" messages through brain contact alone. The other person will never know where the message came from. But will think it's his own idea.

Yes, you'll discover all this and more in Anthony Norvell's epoch-making book. You'll see how it all works by reversing many of the traditional laws of nature. Things that were once impossible are now possible.

SEND NO MONEY....YOURS TO READ FOR 10 DAYS. FREE!

We feel that this is one of those books which only comes along once or twice in every age. It is of such importance to mankind, it should be in everyone's hands as soon as possible. So that you will be able to get it without delay, we are willing to let you have it without you're having to send in one cent. Just fill out and mail the enclosed card.

We will rush you by return mail, "Norvell's Dynamic Mental Laws For Successful Living," by Anthony Norvell. Read it and discover the secret of "Mental Projection." Get the things in life you've always wanted.

Then when the 10 days are up simply send us $6.95 plus postage and packing charges. Or return it and owe nothing. We leave it up to your sense of fair play.

Best wishes for a great new life,

A Declaration Against America Humanity
when in the course of human events it has become necessary for me to equalize and seek revenge for all the inhuman treatments ~~that I have~~ ~~received by those who~~ committed against me by the American people.

the manifestation of this Declaration will be executed by its purport (a) as soon as he is able to command a sum of money ($2,000) and to acquire some firearms - the specifications of which have not been established yet.

The victims of the party in favor of this declaration will be or are now - ~~in~~ the President, vice,
etc - down the ladder.

The time will be chosen by the author at the convenience of the accused.

the method of assault is immaterial - however the type of weapon used should influence it somehow.

Q1 FBI 21

the ~~to~~ author believes that many in fact multitudes of people are in harmony with his thoughts and feelings

the conflict and violence in the world subsequent to the ~~en~~ enforcement of this decree, shall not be considered lightly by the ~~supp~~ author of this memoranda, rather he hopes that they be the initiatory military steps to WWII - the author expresses his wishes very bluntly that he wants to be recorded by historians as the man who triggered off the last war -

life is ambivalence

life is a struggle

life is wicked

if life is in any way other wise, I have Individuality is the necessary complement of the Universal Spirit which was the subject of our consideration last Sunday - The whole problem of life consists in finding the true relation of the individual to the universal Originating Spirit and the first step towards ascertaining this is to realize what the Universal Spirit must be in itself, we have already done this to a certain extent and the conclusions we have arrived at are:-

that the essence of the spirit is life, love and beauty
